

Looking for a Coordinator devoted to compassion

Born within the vision of Interfaith Partnership of Greater Metropolitan St. Louis, the Coordinating Circle of Compassionate STL is seeking a coordinator to help the compassionate movement in the St. Louis region spread into regional civic venues. The person(s) in this coordinating position would work voluntarily until supporters are found to invest money in our progress.

This coordinator will do and delegate administrative and outreach work on behalf of our efforts to unite various organizations in the community with the goal of having St. Louis designated as a “compassionate city”—along with the 400 plus compassionate cities around the globe. This movement has evolved out of the Charter for Compassion which is attached. For more information listen to the Ted talk by Karen Armstrong which started this movement and go to charterforcompassion.org.

Duties include communication and organization of information; contacting those in managerial and CEO positions in business, government, and community who have an interest in community betterment; exploring the possibilities and advantages of establishing a 501C3; chairing the Coordinating Circle meetings. Other staff will support outreach via social media as well as website management and email marketing.

These are attributes we are looking for:

- *Great interest in the global Compassionate Cities Movement.
- *Willingness to become familiar with its origin and current development in other US cities.
- *Availability of time and willingness to make contacts in the St. Louis civic community.
- *Skill in gathering key contacts together for planning.
- *Compassion!
